Wildcats First ends second year with students

By Mary Masonholder Wilson
Gazette Staff

Last year, a group of community members, mainly from the area businesses, formed a group called 'Wildcats First'. Their mission was to meet with the juniors of Columbus Community School several times to 1. show the students they cared and to develop a relationship with these students. 2. cheer on the students and encourage them to raise their test scores, especially on the standardized test that students take called the ITED tests. 3. help get the Columbus School off the "watch list", a list of schools who have low ITED scores.

Students were bused to various locations downtown to meet with these community members four times. These juniors were divided into small groups and were assigned their Wildcats First leaders.

Wednesday, April 12th was the last meeting between students and Wildcats First members, and from surveys taken; this student-community relationship has been a grand success! This final meeting, held at the American Legion, was the entire junior class and a meal was served.* Food will win the heart of any young teen!

However, all students filled in a survey without their names, and then a different survey was taken with names if the students so chose. Some of the comments: Jocelyn Ramirez: "Thank you for all the stuff you've done. It really helped on the ITED's." Haley Taylor: "I think it's good to get us younger people involved in the community." Christine Milder: "I feel like it was great to learn how much they care." Trevor Conaway: "It was a great learning experience and thank you Wildcats First!" Edgar Rodriguez: "It was nice meeting leaders of the community." Esteban Gutierrez: "We are very thankful for the businesses in the community for caring." Gary Cutler: "It was fun."

Jenna Fuller: "I think that Wildcat's first is a great program. I think that it says a lot about a community when the local businesses take an interest in the education of the children of that community and that it is a great experience for us, as students, to be able to form these connections." One of the student groups met at Tyson, and Fuller went on to comment: "I really enjoyed getting to know Sergio Ayala, Dave Duncan, and Mike Grothe of the Tyson Team!" Abigail Garcia added: "I had a great time visiting Tyson and interacting with some of the people that worked there."

Some of the anonymous comments on surveys: I liked attending the Community Club meeting because, "I gained strength to actually try on the ITED's." The Community Club taught me "why the tests are important." "I gain more confidence."

When asked, "Do you think the community group put too much pressure or stress on you?" one student answered, "They put a lot of pressure on us, but not too much, and it was worth it!" Another student replied, "I don't think they put any pressure at all."

In their surveys, all the students felt that the Wildcats First group should continue this next year for the juniors. However, some said they hated to see their year come to an end, and they wished they could do it again next year.

Ivan Gonzales, former graduate of CCHS and of Iowa State University, has returned to Columbus Junction and has been interning at the Columbus Development Center. He spoke to the students about how he appreciates his home community, but how he also matured having left the community, having achieved a college education, and having traveled to foreign countries. All of this has given him a broader perspective on life and increased his expectations. He sees that "goals can be set as a community and as a school."

The other speakers at this last meeting were Columbus Principal Jeff Maeder, who thanked the community and Wildcats First for their support of the school and the students. Then Wildcats First members, Mark Huston, Steve Sents, and Dan Wilson spoke to wish the students well and to stress that they will always be a part of the community even after they graduate. Also the community would welcome them to stay here or to come back after their further education.

The relationships that have been formed from these meetings will be long lasting. Perhaps Steve Sents, local attorney, said it best, "We (the community) are vested in a part of your lives."

Sam Bell set to end 41 year Banking Career

By John Carpenter
Gazette Staff

I knew that someday I would have to write this story, but it certainly is something that I haven't looked forward to. My good friend, Sam Bell, has announced his retirement from Community Bank effective at the end of the month. Although I am happy for Sam, I'm surely going to miss him downtown.

Sam graduated from Columbus Community High School in 1966 and attended Simpson College, graduating in 1970. He then entered the Army Reserves serving on active duty for six months then as a reservist for six years.

Sam began working for Peoples National Bank on March 1, 1971. He married Betty Jane (Emily) Spinner from Lansing, Iowa, and brought her to the community where she taught in the L-M School system for thirty-nine years.

Like all new bank employees, he started in bookkeeping, then worked as a teller, eventually becoming a loan officer. Sam witnessed many changes in his forty-one years of banking. The computer age was just coming into existence, and banking methods underwent numerous changes during Sam's career. Today banking is primarily an electronic operation, as opposed to the manual operation that it was when Sam began.

Sam watched the bank convert from a national bank to a state bank, was involved in the formation of a holding company, Peoples National Corporation, then played an instrumental role in the bank's purchase of Community Bank in Muscatine. The two banks merged into Community Bank, which was eventually purchased by CBG. The bank now has five locations in four towns, and Sam watched the bank grow from $6,396,000 in assets when he began to a $250 million dollar bank today.

Those are the basic facts of Sam's career, but I have more to add. I had the good fortune to work with Sam for nearly 25 years. From the first day that I arrived at the bank, Sam became a friend. Rather than look upon me as competition in his career, Sam did everything he could to help me. He was a Godfather to one of my sons, and was an enormous help when my late wife, Judy, became ill. He filled in numerous Saturday mornings for me, something that I will always remember and appreciate.

But I also witnessed Sam's work ethic. Sam came to work every day to do his job. There always seemed to be a line of people waiting to see Sam. I recall days where there never seemed to be a let up for him, but Sam never shirked his responsibilities. If somebody wanted to see him, he was willing. And Sam cared about his customers. He took great pride in their successes, and was sympathetic in their failures. We worked together quite a bit during the farm crisis of the 1980's, and I saw true compassion in Sam during these difficult times, and his work to solve some of the problems was instrumental in many cases. There are people still farming today because of Sam's tireless efforts.

Yes, Sam has always been my friend, and I would suspicion that most of his customers also consider him a friend as well as their banker. Sam's comments when I interviewed him confirmed this, "I have been very fortunate to have had so many good and loyal customers in my forty-one years here, and have had the opportunity to work with some of the best friends a person could have. I just want to thank everyone for their loyalty and friendship to me, and I'll miss them."

I'm going to miss seeing Sam on Main Street, but Sam and Emily will now have the opportunity to spend more time at their second home on the banks of the Mississippi River in Lansing, Iowa. But Sam did assure me that we'll be seeing him around town also.

A reception is planned at the bank for Sam on Monday, April 30th from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m.
